Council extends spending levels of 1992-93 budget; awaits '93-94 budget draft

At a special meeting held June 29 to specifically address budgetary business, the City Council approved an amended budget for fiscal 1992-93 which ended June 30, and extended those budgeted expenditures until the 1993-94 budget is adopted.

Though City Manager Jack Shelver had hoped he would also be unveiling the fiscal 1993-94 budget to council, the budget was not yet completed. He expects it will be finished today.

He stated that if the shift in property tax from cities to the state is finalized, Lemon Grove will lose $87,000 in general fund monies.

He explained that in an attempt to "cushion" that impact, the state distributed transportation development funds to cities as well as the revenue which would result from a half-cent sales tax increase, if the voters approve such a ballot measure this November. The city's share of such a sales tax would be about $23,000, he noted.

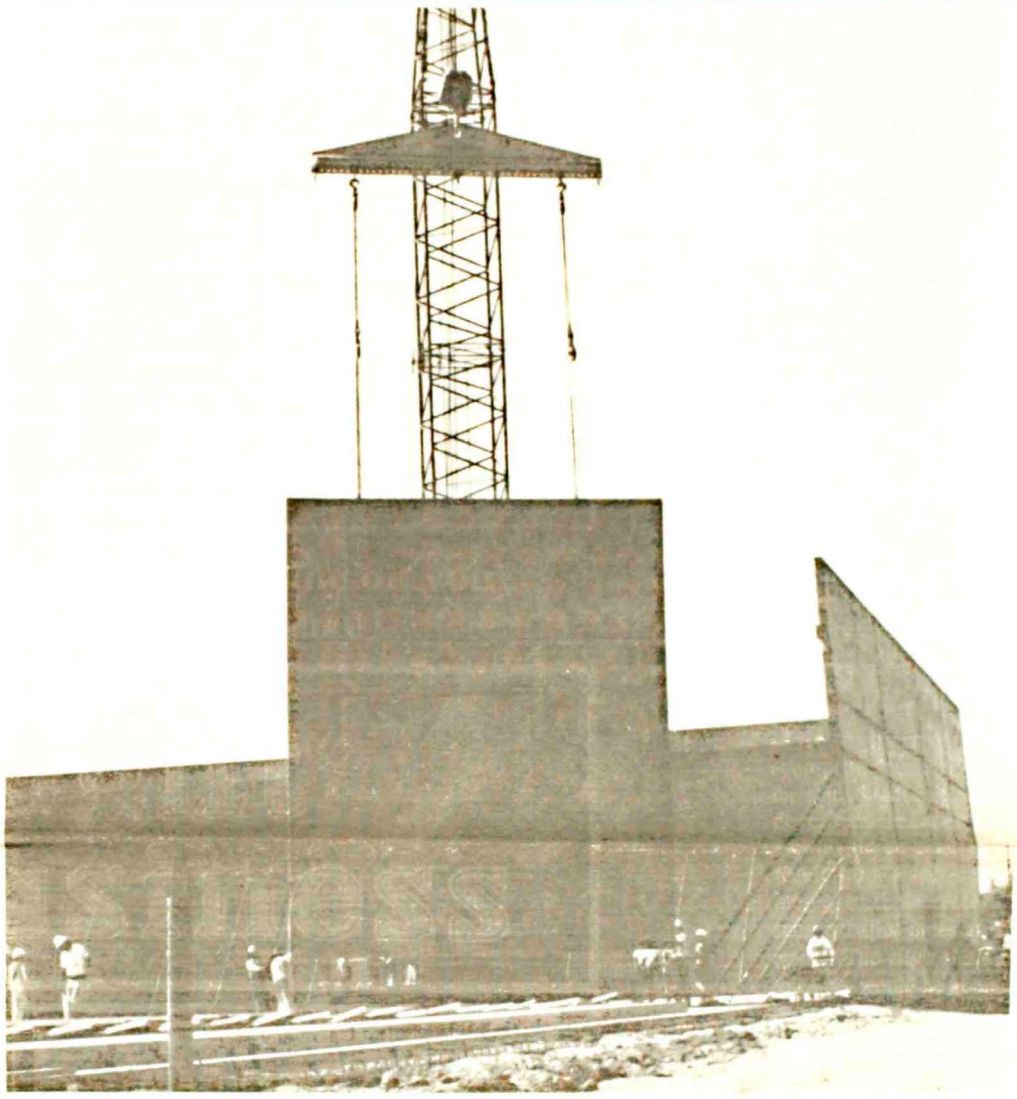
Shelver explained that the shift of transportation monies would be a one-time windfall, whereas the loss in property taxes would be seen in following fiscal years.

According to Shelver, if the council had not taken action to extend the current level of expenditures, the city would then be required to seek council's approval for every separate expenditure it made after Wednesday.

Revenue changes made to the amended budget reflected the lower share of property taxes received by the city following the state's September budget decision shifting those monies as well as others such as the cigarette tax revenue to its coffers, reported Shelver. These actions resulted in a $10,000 reduction in general fund revenue for fiscal 1992-93, he noted.

Expenditures were also adjusted, and now reflect a $5,000 increase caused by resurrecting the city clerk position, which for the last several years had been combined with the city manager position. Also, the city's law enforcement contract increased an unexpected $62,000.

According to Shelver, the budget approved last July contained a $124,000 deficit which has grown to $157,000. To somewhat close the gap, $80,000 was shifted from the sanitation district account to the general fund, he said.



If you haven't seen the Home Depot site on Broadway since Tuesday, you might be surprised to see that all the exterior walls were put in place on Wednesday. The tilt-up concrete slabs were poured on the site and lifted into place with a crane.

City opts for new Dial-A-Ride contractor, adds a county bus route

by Lindy Magner

Beginning today, the city's Dial-A-Ride service will be provided by minivans rather than taxi cabs, the result of the city council's decision to utilize the County Transit System's (CTS) program.

According to City Manager Jack Shelver, the change was prompted when city staff realized that by continuing with Yellow Cab, its service provider for a decade, it was violating federal legislation which took effect about two years ago.

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) requires that public transportation systems receiving public subsidies must be accessible by all citizens. Yellow Cab was not equipped to carry disabled riders, and had little interest in modifying their taxis, according to city staff.

The former Yellow Cab contract provided two taxis and an on-reserve cab at a cost to the city of $115,000 annually.

The new, one-year contract with the county will cost the city $165,698. Through a contract with Southern California Medical, the county will provide the city with two minivans and one reserve, lift-equipped van. For the past three years, the county has been providing Spring Valley with a similar Dial-A-Ride program, using the same contractor.

"This is considerably more costly," said Shelver, noting that ridership is expected to decline - not as a result of the new contract but because of a fare increase which went into effect about a month ago.

He added that the increase in general public fares from $1.50 to $1.75 was not caused by the new contract. The $1 fare for the disabled was not increased.

"The Metropolitan Transit Development Board (MTDB) has been requesting a uniform fare rate for all cities," said Shelver, adding that the increase makes Lemon Grove's rates the same as those of El Cajon and La Mesa.

Another transportation change for the city comes with the recent approval of a new county bus route which will connect the Lemon Grove and La Mesa trolley stations, said Shelver.

"MTDB and La Mesa told us this was a good idea, and we said we'd be willing to try it," he explained, adding that Lemon Grove will pay over $29,000 for the new route - #876 - La Mesa would pick up the tab for nearly $43,000. However, both the new Dial-A-Ride contract and the new bus route could be scrapped in a year, dependent on the results of a $30,000 county-funded transit study on the city's transportation needs, said Shelver.

"The study will tell us if what we have now is right for us," he said, explaining that though the city has taken surveys from time to time on the public transportation needs of residents, a comprehensive study had not been conducted since 1979.

The study is expected to be completed in January, and could indicate changes in areas served by public transit as well as changes in hours or days of operation, Shelver noted.

"Next year, we'll be taking a hard look at other services and what we need to trim," he said, noting that the new bus route and Dial-A-Ride contract will cause the city to dip into reserve transportation funds.

The new Dial-A-Ride hours will be Monday through Friday, 5:30 am to 9:30 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday, 6:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Call 279-4047 at least one hour in advance for reservations. Pictured is one of the new minivans.

Connolly justifies budget

Dear Editor:

In your latest edition, you asked me to defend my vote on the budget proposal recently passed by the Legislature. In response, I would like to offer the following facts for consideration.

The editor asks why those of us in the Legislature haven't reduced the size of government and cut state spending. If you examine the record, it's clear that we have.

In 1988-89, at the beginning of our current recession, the state's spending plan called for $66 billion in expenditures. This year the governor proposed a $52 billion budget. That's a $14 billion spending reduction over the last 4 years.

In inflation-adjusted dollars, the state general fund spending in the budget just passed is 7.6 percent below our spending levels of just two years ago. This figure does not include the $2.6 billion reduction in state support for local government.

State agency budgets were reduced from between 10 and 15 percent this year, after taking a 15 percent hit last year.

But the truth about our budget is that most of the spending it covers is not for state agencies, as the editor implies. The budget also provides revenue for K-12 education, the University of California, state college and community college systems, the state's prisons and health and welfare agencies.

K-12 education suffered no budget cuts this year. They are protected because of guaranteed funding levels instituted by voters with the passage Proposition 98. In order to meet that mandate, it is necessary to cut virtually all other government spending. With tax revenues down, billions had to be cut from non-K-12 education.

We also did not cut from the state prison system. A cut to prisons means that dangerous criminals would be released into society, putting all citizens at risk.

We did cut state support for higher education and we cut support for health and welfare payments, both by more than $350 million each.

Some of us wanted to make deeper cuts in spending on state administrative departments, but Governor Pete Wilson said "no," and Republicans in the Legislature backed him up.

Some legislators wanted to raise taxes and avoid cuts to local government. Tax increase right now seem counter productive, so I could not support any proposal to raise taxes.

East County cities will suffer some revenue loss, but the loss is about half of what the cities braced for after Gov. Wilson unveiled his budget proposal. San Diego County cities were not hit as hard this time because the San Diego Democratic delegation finally had enough clout in the Assembly to overcome the Legislature's past impulse to unfairly divide tax revenue among the larger metropolitan areas.

Los Angeles legislative leaders lobbied against the property tax shift, and instead proposed taking away from local government other revenue sources, such as sales tax and vehicle-license fees. If Los Angeles had been successful in its effort, San Diego County and its cities would have suffered a severe blow.

This spending plan calls for half of all of the money shifted from cities to come from the cities within Los Angeles County, the other half is divided among the remaining cities in the state. For years, San Diegans have bemoaned the inequities of state spending. This budget takes an important step toward correcting those inequities. During my campaign, voters told me they wanted the inequities corrected. I voted for a budget that moves toward putting San Diego on an even playing field with Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Yes, I know this budget hurts, but it is a budget that hurts across the board. There is something in it for everybody to hate. I knew we were on the right path when other conservative Republicans and liberal Democrats railed against it. This is a bipartisan, compromise spending plan that gives more to conservatives than to liberals.

What we should all remember is this is a budget that was passed before the beginning of the new fiscal year. During the past election, voters said they were tired of delay and gridlock. When I cast my vote for this budget, I voted against gridlock. I was sent to Sacramento to make a difference, to reject the status quo, to do my job in a timely fashion. I am working hard to represent the citizens of the 77th district., and I welcome challenges such as yours. I am happy to defend my votes, and if any constituent feels I am going astray, I will listen to those concerns.

Tom Connolly

We appreciate your honest reply, Tom. However, there is an old saying that "Figures can lie, and liar's can figure."

Since we're all "hurting" - How many members of the Legislature have been laid off? How much was their salary cut in the last four years? Since when is putting a sales tax back on us that was to expire not a tax? How will San Diego County provide services to its residents if the sales tax extension fails? You grabbed $125 million from them alone to cover state overspending.

Those of us who run businesses or households have to keep our spending at a level that we can afford. We know very few local companies that can afford to give the salaries, vacations, pensions and other benefits that state employees receive. Maybe the state better look at cutting more.

We brought to your attention one area of state waste that still hasn't been corrected - the doubling of advertising costs in elections, hearings and other matters because the state advertises in English and Spanish.

We believe you are trying to do a good job for your constituents, but it appears that you have been duped by the gang that leads the Assembly - to whom you are beholden for your victory.

Burns offers support for Connolly

Dear Editor:

I would like to submit my personal endorsement of the efforts that our freshman Assemblyman Tom Connolly is putting forth in Sacramento. In what has to be termed a "zoo" in these final days of trying to agree on a state budget, it is a difficult job to say the least. With partisan politics and the various parochial wishes pulling the process in as many directions, there has to be some compromise. To demand otherwise is just unrealistic in today's governmental society.

This week, I was privileged to be present on both the Assembly floor as well as the Senate, and witnessed first hand the debate and the total involvement of our legislators. We can say all we want about how we got in the predicament that we are in, but the hard facts are that we are, and a budget is mandated by law.

I believe that Tom is doing a fine job and is truly dedicated to what is best for his district, and Lemon Grove especially. The need for hit pieces must indicate that his detractors are fearfully lashing out in desperation, and I would expect that the public will take them for just what they are. Distortions, innuendos, and half truths or lies should not deter this very sincere young mans efforts.

The facts are that San Diego came off better than most areas in the final budget agreement in the Assembly. When it was evident that the Los Angeles people were very unhappy with their lot in the agreement, I felt elated and proud of the final outcome. When I say proud, of course the situation can never be right until Sacramento cleans it's own house, and allows us to keep our monies to do what has to be done at home.

Keep working, Tom and give it your best shot.

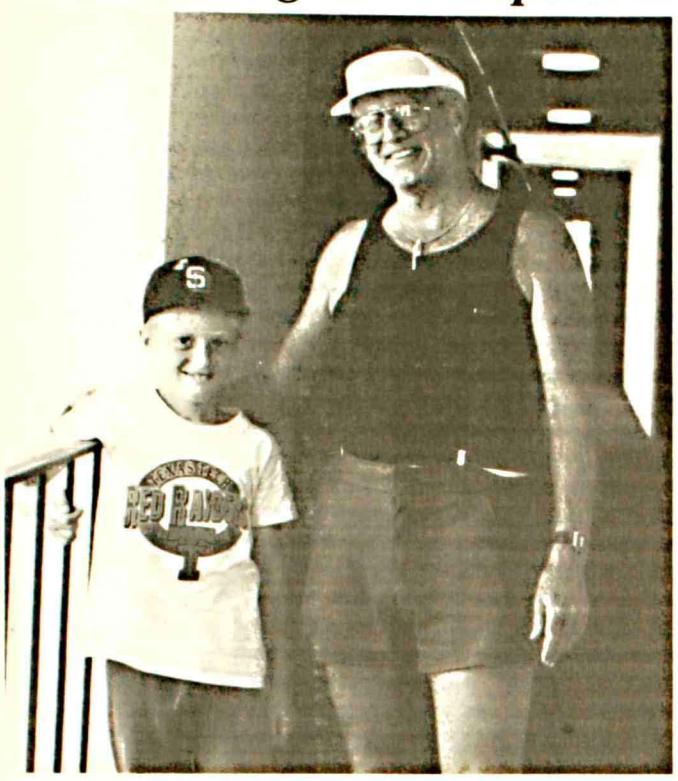
Mike is 'Lego' Champion



Seven-year-old Mike Champion's expertise at building with Legos won him the "best of show" award in the Del Mar Fair's youth hobby show. He designed a fortress connected with five ships, which also won a first-place ribbon in addition to the "best of show" plaque. The Monterey Heights Elementary student also had a first-place winner last year, with a "Back to the Future" design which included vintage cars. When he's not linking Legos, Champion enjoys playing Little League T-ball. He is pictured here with his dad, Jerry Champion.

Library offers summer program

Dunn staging art show at Fair

An exhibit filled with watercolors, sculptured glass and other works of art is currently drawing crowds at the Del Mar Fair through July 4. The "Fine Art In All Media" exhibit is located on the first floor of the grandstand and is a showcase for artists from Southern California. In addition to traditional genres, computer-generated art is also highlighted, with daily demonstrations at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the exhibit.

This year there are 495 pieces of artwork displayed, according to Lemon Grove resident Carol Dunn, superintendent of "Fine Art In All Media." There were 1,664 total entries for the show and the works selected for display went through a jury process by professional artists.

"It's an exciting exhibit with a variety of works," said Dunn.

Dunn was superintendent of the "Youth Art and Art in All Media" for three years until they became two separate exhibits this year. While not busy coordinating the exhibit, she promotes local artists from Dunn Art Promotions in Lemon Grove.

"Good art makes you think and feel, and it does not always have to be pretty," Dunn explains. "If you see an artwork that you don't understand, stop for a moment, relax and approach it from a different viewpoint - don't let art intimidate you."

Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

Airport issues

Airports around the country are an education in the degree of accomplishment of the larger cities in today's travel scene. They are almost 100 percent an embarrassment to me as a San Diegan.

My most recent trip to Miami for the Metropolitan Transit Development Board made me realize that "America's Finest City" has one of the poorest excuses for an airport of international size and quality. It made me reflect upon other trips that we have taken, and compare air terminals that we have visited, to our own Lindberg Field.

The one kudo that we get constantly is that it is close to downtown and all of the convention facilities, and even the golf courses. Of course this is fine, but impossible to continue if a truly international size airport is to be located in the San Diego area. No other city, even the considerably smaller ones, have this attribute simply because of size required. The land required for the huge aircraft in service today, and the bigger ones of the future, is lots of acreage. Airports cannot be in the center of any city anymore.

Miami was a $20 cab ride from the airport, and Detroit, Orlando, and Minneapolis are similarly priced. Lindberg field costs less than $5, but the hard facts are that even with the Marine Corps Recruit Depot and the Naval Training Center land added to the airfield, it would be woefully short of space. If the land off to the northwest were condemned and the runways extended, it would mean going out to the ocean. I cannot even comprehend what the impacts would be to the neighbors of such an extension.

People movers and shuttles of various types carry one from one concourse to another. These are buses, subway-type tubes, or automated vehicles on fixed guideways. They are all fast, comfortable, and trouble-free. Most of these airports accommodate many more airline services, and these include the overseas carriers that we see none of in San Diego. Lindberg Field is an excellent facility for the level of service that we are getting now, and should be retained, but San Diego needs more.

After 30 years of bickering and indecisiveness, we are no closer to where we should be in the company of American cities. We need an international airport to truly be the country's eighth largest city. The parochial and myopic posture of our metropolitan components must be dropped so we get together and do what is right if we are to survive. Being a "cul de sac" is not what I perceive as economic survival. It is more like couch-potato suicide.

San Diego should think in a strictly regional mindset, and be selfish nationally. Mexico wants us to remain a cul de sac so that they can be the recipient of international air travel benefits instead of us. We should disregard the other side of the border and build our own international airfield on Otay Mesa where there is adequate room to accommodate it. The location is not as central as we might wish, but it is the only one that is feasible. Other locations such as Miramar and North Island may be more convenient, but the economic impacts of losing the Navy are devastating. The petty, NIMBY political maneuvering must stop, and the life of San Diego must be saved by a transfusion of international air travel. If we do not, in less than 30 more years we will be a poor-relation suburb of Tijuana.

Grossmont High School District news

by June Mott
Board Member

The June 24 Grossmont Union High School District Governing Board meeting promised to be a lengthy one when 95 items under the 13 general headings were revealed.

While many can be taken care of under the consolidated motion, there is always a handful that cannot. It was certainly true of this meeting which began at 7 p.m. and lasted until 10:45 p.m.

A proposed hearing for the '93-'94 budget was quickly disposed of in seconds when no one wished to speak to it.

Science teacher Charles Downing of Monte Vista High School was recognized by the Board for his selection as finalist in the 1993 Presidential Awards of Science Teaching through the California Department of Education.

Three people, retiring this June, were awarded the coveted golden "G" award, a pin which is given only to those who have performed above and beyond their contract duties of serving students, district and community:

Home Economist Sue Blass of Valhalla; Ned Blass, principal of Granite Hills; and Tom Hood, principal of Monte Vista.

Nicole Splinter, Grossmont High, and Matt Holder, Monte Vista, were approved by the Board as student representative to the Board and alternate student representative to the Board. Candidates for these positions must file a written application and speak before the District ASB (Associated Student Body) as part of the process. The ASB then recommends two of its members for the Board positions. Since this is not a popularity contest, the public can see that the students have to earn the right to represent their peers on the Governing Board.

Anne Paxton, a German, humanities and English teacher, was hired as a replacement and assigned to El Capitan beginning in September; and Mathew Rabasco, an art teacher, was hired as a temporary teacher in a 60 percent capacity for El Cajon High School.

Fifty-nine teachers were hired for summer school work ranging from curriculum writing to conferencing to institute work or teaching; 29 teachers were employed for summer teaching at Foothills Adult School; and 8 teacher/supervision assistants were hired for districtwide assignment.

Two adult-school teachers had their resignations accepted (classes cancelled or other reasons). Margaret Gedman, administrative clerk at the Health Occupations Center was hired as a replacement. Four classified resignations were accepted.

Approved as temporary classified and student employment for the summer were 92 individuals; 338 students were employed under the Hire-A-Youth Program through the Career Development Center.

Board approval was granted for the continued implementation of the Drug, Alcohol, and Tobacco Plan. Funding of $101,820 comes from the Drug Free Schools and Communities Act (PL 100-297). Funding from Tobacco Prevention Education (AB 75, Prop. 99) is contingent upon action of the state Legislature. The projected amount from that source as $69,836. There is no impact to the general fund.

The GUHSD offers a number of alternative education schools and programs for students-at-risk with the primary focus to provide alternative instructional opportunities/approaches that will help answer academic success culminating in a high school diploma or a GED. Currently the District does not have a planned formal approach to connect successful adult role models with at-risk students.

Chaparral High School presented a program called "Mentoring For Life Success Pilot Program for At-Risk Youth" for approval. In coordination with Kevin La Chapelle, El Cajon Police liaison to the schools, Craig Caster of Caster Enterprises (a former District student) and Miles McPherson (former San Diego Charger player), a program is being planned. These people will work with Kiwanis and other civic/ business organizations for recruitment of male and female mentors who will share real life experiences, ambitions, character traits and responsible behaviors that will give these students a life example to follow in pursuit of becoming responsible citizens, Barbara Stanley, principal of Chaparral High School, will identify the mentees. Mentors will go

From Where I Sit

A rude awakening

by Frank Andrews

After opening our Ranch Bar-B-Q restaurant and working so hard and long to get it going my wife, Florence, and I needed a rest. We had stayed with my wife's cousin Ruby in Detroit when I took my first job before I went into service. It had been several years since we had seen Ruby and her family so that was the most likely spot to get some much needed "R and R" (rest and relaxation).

We lived upstairs above the restaurant so we were never free of its dominating our lives. We closed up at the usual 2 a.m., cleaned up the joint, loaded our gear and three daughters into our brand-new station wagon and were off on our journey to the big city of Detroit.

I had just received delivery of the new Ford deluxe wagon and had it decorated with our logo for the restaurant, Little Pedro, in Scotchlite. It was sharp and could generate much business for us. The logo was created by a top sign company and copyrighted. That logo was to be used on all of our signs, book matches, napkins, carry-out boxes, etc.

I drove until the sun was coming up in the direction that we were headed. I was so tired after such a long, hard day behind the grill that I asked Florence if she would help out and drive for a while. She gladly agreed and took over the controls.

The highway was slick from the early morning moisture and she drove accordingly as the traffic was very light at that time of day. It didn't take long for me to flake out next to her in the passenger's seat. The three little girls in the back seat were sawing logs without a care in the world. We had just passed through the little town of Black River Falls, Wisconsin, which was only a short distance from the Minnesota-Wisconsin border.

I was awakened abruptly from my nice sleep time by my wife's screaming as the new Ford was rolling over in the ditch. I scrambled out of the overturned vehicle to check all hands. Florence had hit her left shoulder and was bruised a little. The girls were fine, only a bit shaken. I was fine except for my crying at the sight of the bright yellow station wagon that was totaled in the ditch before me.

We gathered up all our gear and hitchhiked into Black River Falls. The local garage towed the wrecked vehicle into their shop and made it temporarily fit to drive. We then boarded the Greyhound and headed off to Detroit leaving the Ford at the garage to be picked up on our return from the "auto city." We had planned and needed this vacation so badly that just a little accident couldn't stop us.

We arrived in Detroit the following day. As soon as I could get to a phone I called my banker back in Minnesota, "Hey, Kenny, is my new Ford insured for collision?"

"What's the matter Frank? Did you wreck it? If you did, your fully covered, except for a $50 deductible," he assured me.

We had a wonderful vacation in the big city, after which we picked up our beat up automobile and headed back to the old grind.

becoming responsible citizens. Barbara Stanley, principal of Chaparral High School, will identify the mentees. Mentors will go through a training program dealing with high-risk students. The program will be thoroughly evaluated throughout the '93-'94 pilot year. Board approval was granted.

Funding of $47,038 for the remodeling of industrial technology classrooms at Mount Miguel High School as awarded to the lowest bidder was approved. This cost is provided for by Carl D. Perkins funds. The remodeling is complete.

There will be no fiscal impact on the general fund for the employment of a school liaison officer from the El Cajon Police Department to initiate a Gang Violence Prevention Program. The Police Department has submitted a grant to the Office of Criminal Justice and planning for this program.

Assistant Superintendent of Finance, Fred Martinez, presented the proposed budget for '93-'94. A revised adopted budget will be available on August 26-27 at the District office from 8 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.

This budget will be submitted to the Board on or before Sept. 1, 1993 for approval. The reserve balance, "estimated" at this time (because the books are not closed), is $7,123,000 compared with a closing balance of $9,415,000 on July 1, 1992.

The annual average daily attendance ('92-'93) in the Grossmont School District was 19,239. The projected attendance for '93-'94 is 19,539 - an increase of 300 students.

Grossmont Union High School District's working budget was $92,370,000 in March; the preliminary adopted budget for '93-'94 is $87,887,000 a loss of $4,483,000. If all sources of income come through, the total income could be $95,009,952 - a loss of $6,775,521 over '92-'93. There is a possibility that the $90 per student promised from the Lottery may be even less - or even zero.

The first reading of the policy leading to Tobacco-Free Schools was approved; both policy and regulation would go into effect on Nov. 18, 1993 (the Great American Smokeout).

In other action, the Board approved the exemption of 10th grade physical education for students who complete a minimum of two interscholastic sports activities.

Rejection of the proposed multicultural policy's second reading by the Board came after 42 speakers addressed the Board. The 4-1 vote of rejection centered around the inclusion of two words in the policy: "sexual orientation." The Board sent the report back to the District committee that had submitted it with the injunction to phrase the policy differently before bringing it back to the Board.

The policy proposed reads as follows: "The Governing Board believes that cultural pluralism is to be valued.

"The purpose of multicultural education is to foster an educational climate that will bring about the elimination of institutional and personal practices which foster attitudes and/or actions leading to discrimination against students, parents/guardians, or school personnel on the basis or race, creed, color, language, national origin, citizenship status, gender, age, sexual orientation and/or handicapping condition."

Administration regulations to go with the policy accompany this Board policy that has been reviewed by the California School Boards Association.

A brief summary of comments made by Board members in rejecting the proposal consist of the following: There is no need to emphasize this at this level; we should be stressing that all students should be exempt from discrimination of behavior, verbal comments, and written comments; and sexual orientation is a private matter.

Two parents of "gay" children spoke movingly of their children's experiences, and a small group of lesbian and gay graduates urged the Board to adopt the policy, emphasizing that San Diego Unified and a few other districts had adopted it without fanfare.

Given the fact that the school year is over and vacations are in full force, it is highly unlikely that the committee will bring back a revised report before fall.

The next Governing Board meeting will be at 7 p.m., July 22, in the Grossmont High School Cafeteria. See you then.

Potter celebrates 100 years

On Thursday, June 24, over 100 family members, guests, and residents gathered together to celebrate the 100th birthday of Mr. S. L. Potter. A longtime resident of Alpine, he has lived at Country Hills for over a year and he continues to be active and productive. Some of the guests at the surprise party included his three sons, their wives, a daughter and her husband, and numerous grandchildren. Friends from Alpine included Barbara Kerrick, and Hank and Agnes Johns, and Mr. Silvers. Potter is active in Country Hills' recreational programs: he is shown here with the children in the "10 Friends" program.
